Capital City Gossip On Various Subjects--- Lands That Are Excellent For Farming.

WATERWAYS GIVING GOOD POWER

A Pension Agency Conducted By The State That Helps The Old Soldier To Save The Expensive Application.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 23.—While people in the large cities like Chicago and New York are asking out a meager existence, there are millions of acres of fine land in Wisconsin and the northwest, which can be had for $4 to $12 an acre and which are covered with timber that will more than pay for the cost of clearing the land for agricultural purposes. This statement is from the report of J. D. Beck, labor commissioner of Wisconsin, which report will shortly be submitted to Governor Davidson. Commissioner Beck has made an investigation of the available lands for settlement and proposes to protect prospective settlers from land agents who are more eager to sell land than to do the best by the people to whom they sell.

Another interesting investigation covered by the report is that of undeveloped water powers of Wisconsin. The commissioner declares that Wisconsin is the greatest water power state in the nation, but that none of the power is developed anywhere near to the maximum. Practically every river of Wisconsin is admirably adapted to water power purposes. In many places there are high banks seemingly provided by nature for no other purpose than to make the construction of dams easy and inexpensive, and back from these places there are usually marsh areas where the water supply can be stored and maintained at an even and almost permanent level.

The commissioner declares that child labor is increasing in this state notwithstanding the strict laws on that subject. He also makes the remarkable statement after discussing the saloon and liquor traffic, that a popular vote on the license or no license question in Wisconsin would probably result against the granting of liquor licenses.

Attorney General Shumard holds that the county is not chargeable with the expenses of holding the primary election. These expenses, he holds, must be paid in the same way and by the same municipalities as the expenses of the general election. In another opinion, in reply to a letter from Commissioner of Insurance Host, regarding the legality of a policy of the Dixie Fire Insurance company, which contains a provision in which the directors and agents of the company are saved free and exempt from any suit arising out of the policy, the attorney general holds that this is a violation of the Wisconsin standard fire insurance policy law and that any agent offering or delivering such a policy is guilty of a misdemeanor.

"Pensions while you wait." This sign may be hung in the office of the department of pensions, connected with the adjutant general's office in the capitol, if the time record for quick allowance of pension claims continues to be reduced. This department is in charge of two Wisconsin veterans, General C. H. Russell, head clerk, and Captain J. M. Williams, clerk, and their years of experience has enabled them to get pensions and increases of pensions for Wisconsin soldiers more certainly and expeditiously than if the claimants were to employ expensive and more or less unreliable pension attorneys. The state maintains this department to enable the old soldiers of Wisconsin to have their pension business handled expeditiously and without being held up by pension sharks. A recent pension paper was successfully handled so fast as to break the office record. The application was for increase of pension. It was made November 7 and allowed November 19, twelve days from the time it was filed. The previous best record of the office was 17 days. The Wisconsin pension office has the record over all the other states in the union for expeditious handling of papers and for large percentage of claims allowed by the pension department at Washington. The Wisconsin percentage is 82 1/2 per cent of allowances. This means that the Wisconsin officers get the claims in perfect shape before sending them to Washington and they know just what the requirements for allowance are. Sometimes it is impracticable to get all the proof of service and other requirements desired, and the claims have to be sent in somewhat faulty, but the most important work of the Wisconsin pension office is assisting pension applicants to perfect their proof and get their documents in such form as to insure allowance by the officials at Washington.

Because of the recent unusual activity of the anarchists in Greece, as well as elsewhere on the continent, extraordinary precautions are being taken to insure the safety of the royal visitors during their sojourn in Rome.

RAILROADS WILL FIGHT EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT

Plan To Combine In Hiring Attorneys To Prove Law Unconstitutional When First Suit Is Brought Under It.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—Fearing that it may cost them millions of dollars annually in damages awarded to injured employees, leading railroads of the United States will unite in an effort to overthrow in the courts, on the ground of unconstitutionality, a law passed by the last congress entitled, "an act relating to liability of common carriers engaged in commerce between the states and territories and foreign nations," to their employees, but commonly called the "employers' liability act." Although confined to railroads, as a result of several conferences between attorneys of eastern and western railroads, an agreement has been reached to carry to the United States supreme court the first case brought by an injured employee of some road which involves the disputed points in the new law.

The plan of the railroad lawyers has been made known to the government, and the attorney-general has announced that he intends to ask leave to intervene in the first case brought under the law to support the constitutionality, validity and interpretation of the act.

The railroads declare that the act is unconstitutional on the single proposition that congress has undertaken therein to invade the rights of the states. The principal fact on which the roads will rely to upset the new law is described by their attorneys as follows:

"By the use of the words 'cars, engines, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, ways of works,' congress extended the provisions of the law over all instrumentalities of companies conducting commerce. The general and sweeping terms 'every common carrier,' 'any of its agents,' and of its officers, agents or employees,' all instrumentalities, establish the proposition that there was but one idea in the mind of congress, namely, that as to commerce there shall be no states. Debates in congress on this act also show conclusively that such was the object sought to be accomplished. Yet the judicial department has been declaring for a hundred years that the power to regulate commerce wholly within a state was a power which the states never surrendered to the federal government, and as congress well knew, much of the commerce of common carriers is carried on wholly within the individual states."

Trans Mississippi Congress Turns Down W. J. Bryan's Ideas Regarding Peace And War.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23.—The resolutions committee of the trans-Mississippi commercial congress today voted down the two resolutions submitted by William J. Bryan last night. They favored the endorsement of the resolution adopted by the inter-parliamentary union in favor of settling international questions, impartially by a commission of investigation before a declaration of war, and sought to place the congress on record as being opposed to private monopolies. The resolutions submitted by the committee endorse the propositions submitted by Secretary Root for the encouraging and upholding of an American merchant marine and for the increasing of our inter-commerce with South America by adequate facilities, to renew and emphasize the congress approval and devotion to the Monroe doctrine. They urge a thorough reorganization of the consular systems, favor the construction of an inter-continental railway between North and South America, ask for the annual appropriation of fifty million dollars for the improvement of canals, rivers and harbors, and recommends no legislation antagonistic to the beet sugar industry be enacted.

SCHEME ADS ARE NOT PROFITABLE

FREQUENT SOURCES OF WASTED
MONEY AND ENERGY.

NEWSPAPERS BEST MEDIUM

Article Written for "The Dry Goods Economist," by J. Montgomery Brown, Adman, for The Fair, Fort Worth, Tex.

As my pet abomination is the man with "the greatest advertising scheme on earth," I will attempt in a few words to give the conclusions I have reached in regard to this class of publicity, and more especially as to the danger, and consequent waste of money, when space in such schemes is used by an adman controlling the publicity of a department store or dry goods store, whose every endeavor should be to reach the woman and the home.

If, however, and especially some of the most progressive and enterprising admen in every city, would make up their minds to say no to the various advertising schemes that confront them each year, they would have considerably more money to spend in legitimate advertising, and their firm's business would increase proportionately.

Some of the schemes presented. Among the advertising schemes most often presented to the average adman are revolving signs on street corners or the walls of buildings; church, society, opera house and other programs; city telephone and hotel directories; wall displays, covers for restaurant bills, etc.

The revolving sign is probably the latest scheme and it may be good advertising as long as it is a novelty. But does any merchant ever recall having made a sale from a revolving sign? Should an adman refuse to go into a scheme of this kind, what influence detrimental to his employer's business could be exerted? None whatever, because the men who usually originate a scheme of this kind stay in the town only long enough to work the merchant for everything there is in it, and then go to new fields.

The Program Proposition. Church program advertising is usually solicited by some prominent citizen or member of the church who allows himself to be pulled into a scheme to go out and "work" other merchants, though the time he loses from his business would more than justify him in giving his check for all the advertising in the program, to say nothing of the feeling against him that every other merchant will acquire through having been held up.

Does any merchant ever remember having made a sale from church program advertising?

Opera house advertising is usually worked by the manager of the local opera house, or by a syndicate that controls many programs. In figuring circulation they usually count the seating capacity of the house, and then add a few hundred for good measure, never once figuring the hundreds of performances where empty seats prevail.

Does any adman ever recall having made a direct sale from an opera house program?—Don't all speak at once!

Directory Cards.

Hotel directories, on the blotter opposite the page for registration, may afford some benefit to the advertiser, but, as a rule, when a man registers at a hotel he is anxious to get to his room, and does not stand around in some other person's way, reading the ads to see what he can buy a shirt or hear some article the cheapest, or hear some local merchant blow his own horn in the same way every other merchant blows his horn in this kind of an ad.

Does any adman who uses the blotter of a hotel register recall any sale he ever made from it?

The front or the back of the city directory is usually filled up with a lot of advertising from admen who never stop to consider the circulation of the directory or how few people looking for a name would have any reason for referring to the advertising. Now, when a person refers to a directory for information he usually does so because he wants it in a hurry, and even if he should stumble on one of the ads in the front or back part how effective would any ad be that is not thoroughly digested?

How many admen recall a sale made from city directory advertising?

The telephone directory advertising where telephone companies permit advertising—and I am glad to know there are a few that do not—is usually gotten up by the popular manager of the local telephone office, who tells you his directory is used more than the city directory. It may be, if you are hunting for a business house that you know has a phone, but if you want to find the address of some person, who can't afford a telephone, it would be best to refer to the city directory.

Base Their Value on Circulation.

In figuring the circulation of the city directory an advertiser can best satisfy himself by asking an employee to keep a tabulated report of the number of times the directory is referred to within a week, or a month, and furnish a record of the information sought therein. If he is buying circulation, this is what an adman should figure on first. He will find he is paying about ten times as much per reader in the city directory, hotel directory, telephone directory, or any other kind of directory, as he would pay in one of his local papers.

Again, how many city directories go into the home?

Another argument against the hotel directory advertising is that the great majority of the hotel patrons are transients, and when they want to make a purchase they usually go out and supply their wants in the nearest store possible.

The Restaurant Ad. Restaurant advertising, on the back of the bill of fare, is usually gotten up by a fellow who guarantees that so many people patronize his certain restaurant per day, and agrees to run your ad for a month, showing you that the circulation is far cheaper than in any other class of advertising.

This argument might be met by the fact that the better restaurants, catering to the class of people who have money to spend, will not permit advertising on their bill of fare, and that the class of restaurants that do permit this are usually patronized by a class of people with less purchasing power. Besides, if the restaurant ad should be read, they are usually grasped entirely from the reader's mind by the meal which intervenes between the reading and the time at which he might go out to answer an ad.

Local Papers the Best Medium.

To my notion there is but one legitimate means of advertising that always brings returns, and that is the local papers. The women, who do most of the department store buying and most of the retail buying of all kinds, depend on the local papers for their information. There is nothing that satisfies an adman more than to get a direct reply from a special inducement he has offered.

Who ever heard of a sale that filled the store to the doors from anything but newspaper advertising? This is a weekly occurrence in every city on Monday and Saturday, especially, and often through the week.

If it were not proven beyond a doubt that a good home newspaper brings a merchant better returns than anything else, you would not find the best admen spending most of their appropriation with them. Ask any leading merchant you know what per cent of his advertising is done with the newspapers, and he will say it runs from 60 per cent. to all of it.

WOULD CHANGE A PRESENT THEORY

LOCATION OF THE POSTOFFICES
ARE IN QUESTION.

HITCHCOCK HAS AN IDEA

Place Them Near the Depots: Themselves, Regardless of Idea of Citizens.

(By William Wolf Smith.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—(Special correspondence.)—The suggestion of First Assistant Postmaster General Hitchcock that the selection of postoffice sites and the architecture of the buildings to be erected thereon should be under the direction of the postmaster general, instead of the present public building act, is a true that some years ago a number of buildings were erected, which might well be termed "monstrosities," which were not suited to the needs of postoffices, but those now in course of construction from plans prepared under the present architect, James Knox Taylor, are not only more pure in design than those of former years, but they are being built to meet the demands for which they are intended and not solely for pleasing the eye.

But it is not so much the style of building that Mr. Hitchcock criticizes as the selections of locations for the buildings. The burden of his song is that the Treasury department, in a majority of cases, selects sites too far from the railroad stations, thereby increasing the cost of handling the mails. He would place the postoffice of every city within eighty rods of the railroad station and put the cost of transportation of the mails to and from the depot on the railroad company.

In discussing with your correspondent, Mr. Hitchcock's declaration, a high official of the Treasury department explained how that department went about the work of selecting a site, and what the agents were instructed to consider before making their reports. "In the first place," said he, "the agent learns through observation what portion of the town is most frequented by the citizens—what streets are mostly traversed by the people. He then finds the center of business, and if a proposal for a site in that part of the city is on his list he examines it thoroughly as to water accommodations, foundations, etc., after which he measures the distance to the railroad station. Public sentiment is also taken into consideration, as well as the probable direction of the growth of the town. In most cases, for some unknown reason, the city is built up toward the northwest, so the inspector considers where the business center will be located in the future, and acts accordingly. It is not an easy matter to please everybody and the selection of a site for a public building is one of the most thankless jobs known of."

The Postoffice department is always consulted regarding these matters, and any suggestions made by its officials are given consideration. Before the plans for a federal building are accepted they are passed upon and approved by a commission consisting of the secretary of the treasury, the postmaster general and the secretary of the interior.

Italy will be represented on the board of directors of the new United Wireless Telegraph company, formed to take over the De Forest and Marconi interests, by Don Giovanni Cattarri of the Stomach.

A Pleasant, Simple, But Safe and Effective Cure for It.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

Cattarri of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and chest, difficult breathing, head aches, feeble appetite, nervousness and a general played out languid feeling. There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition. The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanston, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Glucose and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Cattarri is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed, and the poisonous discharge therefrom, passing backward into the throat, reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion. Catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals. Send your name and address today for a free trial package and see for yourself. Address F. A. dei Principe del Drago. The Prince del Drago is a friend and countryman of Marconi, whose name is inseparably connected with wireless telegraphy. "I am glad to be connected with an enterprise which promises to accomplish so much in a field where my compatriot, Mr. Marconi, has been so prominent," said the prince to the writer, recently. "I consider the possibilities of wireless have scarcely been developed, as yet. New inventions are coming out all the time, and what has been done with doubtless be far surpassed in the future."

Prince del Drago is a nobleman of means, and although a young man is of considerable scientific attainments. He is widely traveled and will spend some months in this country. At present he is stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, awaiting the arrival of his mother, when they will come to Washington for the season as the guests of Baron Edmondo, Mayor des Planches, the Italian ambassador. Baron Planches recently purchased, on behalf of his government, the handsome residence of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, widow of the late Senator Hearst, of California.

Senator Warren of Wyoming sees no reason for an immediate revision of the tariff and does not think it will come in the near future. "Conditions may change during the next year or so," said he, while here this week, "as to make revision undesirable. There may be a decrease in the cost of living without any corresponding decline in wages of labor. At the present time wages are constantly being increased in every line of work and there is no sign of financial depression or of want in any part of the country. Why change the tariff when everybody is so prosperous?"

Edgar A. Unwin, a London manufacturer, says the English people are more religious than those of the United States. "Over here the middle classes do not attend church on Sunday as they used to," he said, "and little interest is taken in religious controversy. It is looked upon by Americans as immaterial. They think more of the almighty dollar."

It is possible Mr. Unwin confounds mere church attendance with deep religious feeling.

With a view of expanding the foreign trade of the United States, a meeting of representatives of national states and local associations interested in commerce has been called by a committee of the New York board of trade to meet in Washington, January 14, to formulate plans to increase American commerce with foreign countries. The governors of all the states have been requested to send ten delegates each. The point is made by the committee that the obstacles which have hampered efforts to develop our commerce are plainly evident, and that they should be removed at the earliest possible moment if we are to attain pre-eminence instead of remaining in the rear in the struggle with Europe for commercial supremacy. The committee feels that whatever means are adopted must be based on the recognition of economic conditions now existing in order to be effective. Secretary Root will address the meeting.

Sever Louis Carbo, minister to the United States from Ecuador, says there are great opportunities for young men of America in the vast mineral and engineering industries of Ecuador. "South America offers more alluring opportunities to young men than any other region in the world," he said recently. He thus paints the southern continent: "Vast mineral deposits and great areas of valuable timber land await the coming of capital and energy that must convert them into private fortunes. Already many thousands of Americans and Europeans are engaged in the exploitation of Ecuador's natural riches, and there is a steady influx of capital and immigrants. Ecuador is quite free from those political disturbances which have served to make investments of capital so unsafe in many southern countries. It is true that armed conflicts occur there and are widely circulated in this country, but revolutions, but their seriousness may be compared with what would have been termed a riot. Ecuador has three distinct climates, low and hot near the coast, where all plant life peculiar to the tropics flourishes in great abundance. Farther back are the snow-covered Andes, and large crops of wheat are produced in the high table land back from the coast."

Two big anti-saloon rallies will be held in the town hall at Darien next Tuesday—one at 2:30 in the afternoon and the other at 7:30 in the evening. Rev. Hare of Milwaukee, state superintendent of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League, will speak in the evening and the Rev. White of Sharon, the Rev. Stullman of Walworth, the Rev. Hodge of Delavan, the Rev. Coffman of Darien, and others will take part in the afternoon discussion. All are invited to attend. Thanks giving services are announced as follows: union service at the Methodist church in Darien at 10:30 next, Thursday morning; Thanksgiving service at the Fairfield Methodist church at 7:30 in the evening. All are invited.

Mrs. Astin says: "My backwash cakes will please you, if you love the good old-fashioned flavor."

CARP FISHING HAS NOT CEASED AS YET

Not Until The Lakes And Streams
Are Frozen Solid Will The Fishermen Stop.

Carp fishing, as an industry, is on the increase in this section of the country. The removal of thousands of tons of this fish from the lakes and streams of southern Wisconsin in the past two years appear to have made no impression upon the quantity of the species as yet. The demand for carp increases as the food qualities of the fish are more and more exploited and it is safe to say that the fishing will continue for several years to come. The carp are not native fish of this section of the country, but were originally imported from Germany. Former Governor Hoard has been accredited with having introduced them into Wisconsin waters, but large ponds were kept on private grounds long before he conceived the idea of a wholesale immigration. Many of these ponds were released into the lakes and streams, particularly Rock river and Lake Koshkonong by their owners, near St. Atkinson, and the fishy population has increased wonderfully since that time.

Shipped Alive.

Shipping live carp from the lakes where they are taken in nets to the city where they are stored alive in large tanks of water is an industry probably without parallel in the whole country. The more surprising is the method employed in the shipment. The fish are sent into the city in boxes closely packed, and without water to keep them alive.

The firm which originated and carries on this novel industry is a Chicago firm of fish and oyster dealers. The firm is armed with a government permit to seine for carp in the Fox lake region of northern Illinois. This constitutes the chain of lakes formed by Pistakee, Fox, Koshkonong, and Grass lakes, together with the connecting of Fox river and the minor lakes of the chain.

This ingenious firm, since the carp became thick in the region, has shipped hundreds of thousands of pounds to the Chicago and New York markets. They have been known to take 50,000 pounds in a day.

Expressed in Airtight Boxes.

The big seines are set in the lake and slowly reeled in until the fish are inclosed in a small compass, and confined where they can be handled readily. At the last possible moment the fish are taken from the water and packed in flat fish boxes. These boxes are then covered over with chipped ice or when possible snow is used. The covering is closely tamped down to prevent the entrance of air and as many boxes as can be packed are rushed to the train for shipment. So much anxiety is shown to hurry them to Chicago without waste of time that often during the shipping season, which is in the late fall and winter, the express train which takes them is delayed to ten minutes at the station while the boxes of living express are being loaded.

In Chicago the train is met by wagons and are driven with all possible speed to the warehouse, which contains the mammoth tank. In all the fish are probably not out of the water over an hour and twenty minutes, and the figures of the company show that not more than from three to seven per cent die as a result of their waterless journey.

Fattened in Tanks for Market.

Another peculiar feature of the industry is the fact that the fish are fed and fattened for the market in the Chicago vats. Carp, as is known, will eat anything from ordinary sewage to shelled corn. They are given a fattening diet of soaked grains, and flesh is put on them in the practical manner employed in fattening the ordinary produce of the farm and backyard for shipment.

Often carp are taken weighing from thirty to forty pounds and when ready for the market they have been known to tip the scales at fifty and sixty.

The ordinary American palate does not consider carp edible, but the company has worked up an extensive business in its novel trade selling Jewish people the live fish, which are killed in the manner prescribed by their religious rites. The tenacity of the carp for life enables them alone to be handled in this manner and the concern which has worked up the novel trade has a complete and lucrative monopoly on the business.

WHY JOHNSON CRIED.

"There's an End to All Good-Things," and That Was the Reason He Wept.
When Nat Johnson got back from the Maine woods last summer, he told his friends that for the first time since he was a child, he sat down and cried.

As he put it, "There I was way off in the wilderness, and I had smoked my last Wadsworth Bros. 'Chicos', and knew I couldn't get another until
I reached civilization."

It is strange what a hold the Wadsworth Bros. "Chicos" got on a man. They are absolutely free from all artificial flavoring, just the natural flavor of the pure Havana leaf, like that of a 25c Carolina perfecto. They burn evenly, with a solid white ash that stays on as all good cigar ashes should.

People's Drug Co. have the local agency for the "Chicos," and can now sell a genuine long filler Havana cigar for 5c that is better than any of the 10c smokes on the market. There is no "six-for-a-quarter" about the "Chicos," they are straight 5c—worth 10c. Try one and see how true this is.

Wadsworth Bros. "Chicos" are also for sale at King's Pharmacy.

THE PRESIDENT CRITICISED

The President is being freely criticised for his action in discharging from the regular army three companies of colored troops. The charges preferred were to the effect that half a dozen colored men in army uniform were mixed up in a riot at Brownsville, Texas, where the troops were garrisoned, and that inasmuch as a number of lives were lost, therefore, the whole battalion must be guilty of murder.

The men were so loyal to each other that not a man could be found to incriminate the guilty parties, and so the three companies were held accountable, and every member discharged and disgraced.

The matter belonged to the war department, and should have been settled by Secretary Taft, but he was in Cuba at the time, and so the President took it up and disposed of the case in short order.

Later an effort was made to have the decision held up for investigation, and Secretary Taft in the absence of the President attempted to do this, but a cable from the chief executive settled the question, and the order for discharge will not be withdrawn.

The question of race prejudice may influence public opinion, to some extent, but the fact is well established that the negro makes a good soldier, and the American people believe in justice, as a rule, without regard to color.

The three companies were officered by white men, and they were veterans in the regular army, enjoying a record for bravery and efficient service. Some of the men were awarded medals for heroism, and all but a handful were on duty in the barracks, at the time of the disturbance, except a few who were in hospitals or home for a brief furlow.

Secretary Taft believed that the guilty should be detected and punished, but he had no desire to punish the innocent. The President seems to have been influenced by impulse, and it is to be hoped that when he has time to give the matter more thought, that his decision will be reversed.

There is some question also as to whether he did not assume undue authority. While the President is the commander-in-chief of the army and navy, the secretary of war is the recognized head of the army, and the executive commander.

He occupies the same position as the superintendent of railway division, and interference in his department by the general superintendent would destroy authority, and lead to confusion.

The action of the President, in this case, is a humiliation to Secretary Taft and his authority, as commander of the army; is weakened, to say the least. What the outcome will be, is difficult to determine. It is to be regretted that the President did not pursue a more conservative policy in this case.

FAKE ADVERTISING

The merchants of Janesville signed an agreement, something more than a year ago, to protect themselves from fake advertising schemes, such as cook books, programs, church fairs and a thousand and one other fakes in the hands of enterprising promoters.

This agreement was printed on a card and attached to it was the names of all the signers, numbering 75 or more. The card was issued to evidence the good faith of the parties interested, as well as to protect them from any attempt at blackmail when they refused to encourage fake advertising schemes.

The agreement was not made for any specified time, but every man who entered into it said that it was a good thing, and he hoped that it would continue indefinitely.

It has resulted in saving the business men a good many dollars, for they all know that cook books, the same as the one now being exploited in the city, as well as many other schemes which are constantly being introduced, are utterly worthless as advertising mediums.

The fact that some local church lends its name to the scheme, contributes nothing to its value, and the few dollars realized by the church is insignificant.

If it is necessary to strengthen the backbone of the business men along this line, they ought to get together and devote an evening to discussion, and decide on concerted action. The contract now existing is good enough, and will fully protect if observed.

The President has acted wisely in refusing to take a hand in the Japanese school muddle in San Francisco. Previous to the disaster there was plenty of school room accommodations for all; but now the quarters are crowded, and the local authorities insist that the Japs shall be educated with the Chinese and other yellow races. The problem may cause trouble in time.

Tom Cooper, the hair brand chauffeur who met his death in an automobile wreck in Central Park, the other night, is a fair representative of a class of men who should never be licensed to run a road engine.

The President is being criticised for hasty action in discharging a battalion of colored troops, and Secretary Taft is censured for interference. Just what the outcome will be is not easy to determine.

Will Forgather to Enjoy Beefsteak and Formally Organize This Evening.

This evening at six-thirty some thirty gentlemen who are considering the organization of a Beefsteak Club will dine in the Ordinary of the City hotel. While there will be other dishes on the menu, beefsteak will be the piece de resistance. The club is not intended in any way to rival the famous Twilight Club that has made Janesville famous throughout the state, but is modeled after the beefsteak club of Rockford, which holds gatherings during the entire year, the summer meetings being in the form of excursions with picnic dinners. Owing to the limited seating capacity of the ordinary at the hotel the number of diners has been limited. The work of organization will be completed this evening and arrangements made for future gatherings.

After playing the two halves to a tie it took the Janesville Y. M. C. The first half ended in a score of 15 to 10 in favor of the wagon-makers and when time was called at the close of the second the tally board showed 22 to 22. According to rules, the first team to secure two points after such an ending wins, and the locals took their points on two fouls. All the members of the Bower City team were in the game at all times but a week or two will be spent in practice before another contest is arranged. BACK FROM THE BIG
HORSE AUCTION-SALE

J. J. Sheridan and Frank Moutat Returned Empty-Handed Last Evening—There's a Reason—

Alderman John J. Sheridan and Frank Moutat returned empty-handed last evening from the big auction sale of horses at the Dexter-Park amphitheatre, Union Stock-Yards, Chicago, where, in company with thousands of other horsemen, they had been watching the sales for a couple of days past. The two Janesville men went to the metropolis with the intention of buying some speedy equine that might stand a chance of showing its heels to the local fast ones on the ice this winter, and "Jim Perry," a Colorado trotter with a record of 2:09 1/4 and a history extending over a period of from eleven to fourteen years, was the particular prize they had in view. If old "Jim" could be had for about $200 they were determined to buy him, but when a butcher from some little interior town in Michigan promptly in the bidding at $300 they started in the abandoned the project. The old skate was flea-bitten, sloped badly from shoulders to hips, had legs swollen all out of shape, and looked like a worthless wreck, but though he might keel over and die at any moment, he still had good speed in him. The butcher finally bid him in for $500 and had him shipped to some point forty miles from his home. The spring when the annual butcher race for $300 purse in Cassopolis, or Three Rivers, or wherever the town may be, is pulled off the buyer calculates to make a killing, not only capturing the stakes but realizing on enough side-bets to more than pay expenses. "There's no such chances hereabouts," mourned the alderman this morning. "Even if we had gotten 'Jim' and should beat Schaller and these other fellows round here once, they would never come out again, I suppose." Stalls for the horses rent at 75 cents a day and the auction management gets 10 per cent of the purchase price. All defects are candidly bulletined on the blackboard and if there are some which are overlooked and the buyer discovers them, before he turns over his money, he is released from obligation to consummate the deal. Speaking of the approaching fatstock show, Ald. Sheridan said that stalls were renting at $24 a day, even for cattle.

LOCAL FACTORY HAS MUCH WORK AS YET

Rock County Sugar Company Keeps Five Hundred Men Busy With The Beets.

Five hundred men are employed by the Rock County Sugar Co., in transforming forty-five thousand tons of sugar beets into a ton of refined sugar. This immense army of men will have plenty of work for the next month and a half at least, and if the local factory buys the extra beets offered it by the Madison factory, the work will be continued into February at least, if not longer.

It is currently reported that the Rock county factory has been offered a large supply of sugar beets by the Madison concern through their inability to handle their present crop. Nothing definite can be learned regarding the proposed deal at the local factory beyond the fact they are considering a proposition to buy a quantity of beets from Madison.

The local factory is running night and day. Three hundred and eighty men are employed in the factory itself and one hundred and twenty outside. The run of beets averages one hundred and ninety pounds of sugar to a ton of beets and there are forty-five thousand tons of beets to cut, making a grand total of sweetness which will emanate from the Janesville concern enough to feed a small army for over a year.

Lower Percentage. The beets this year are of a lower percentage than formerly. This is due to the purity of the beets themselves not being up to the standard of last year. "While the average is one hundred and eighty pounds per ton some run as high as one hundred and ninety, and other drop below."

C. C. MacLean Sells The Rights of Corn Planter to Ft. Atkinson Concern.

C. C. MacLean has sold the right of manufacturing the "Triumph" corn planter, formerly owned by A. C. Kent, to the Kent Manufacturing Co. of Ft. Atkinson. This doesn't mean the removal of Mr. MacLean's factory to Ft. Atkinson, but simply allows him more room for developing the construction of the Cash Carrier Co., which is now running full blast in the old A. C. Kent factory on North Main street. This business turns itself over every ninety days and at present Mr. MacLean has nine men employed assembling parts and packing them for shipment to all parts of the world. This last week consignments were sent to Australia, Alaska, Mexico and several eastern states. Mr. MacLean states that he sold the manufacturing rights of the Triumph corn planter to the Kent Co. of Ft. Atkinson so he could increase his cash carrier business.

Delivers Address Before New York Chamber of Commerce—Two Foreign Ambassadors Are Heard.

New York, Nov. 22.—The ambassadors of two world powers to the United States spoke at the annual banquet of the New York chamber of commerce at the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday night. They were Baron Speck von Sternberg of Germany, and Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, representing the British government. The former plenipotentiary's theme, "The Commercial Relations between the German Empire and the United States Should Be Reciprocal," had been looked forward to as being particularly apt at this time, when German-American tariff questions are under consideration.

The latter ambassador's remarks on "Diplomacy and Commerce" were heard with interest because of his

Why, you see, her sister is devoted to her and has promised her a gift of $10,000 the day she marries, upon one condition.

"And that condition is?"

"That the husband shall be satisfactory to her."

There was a silence for several minutes, finally broken by Mr. Thaurer:

"Well, in the light of your approaching marriage, which will make you the only man in the family, I presume your influence would count. If I should wish to marry Miss Dora, I suppose you would favor my suit?"

"That is not a new idea to me, I assure you. All I need say is that when you gain Dora's consent you shall have mine."

"Thank you," Mr. Thaurer said with suppressed emotion, and after that neither man spoke until they said good night at Mr. Mitchell's hotel. Mr. Thaurer, upon reaching his own room, snatched a cigar and blew little ripples over his head, thus occupying himself till long after midnight. He seemed to be building castles, and from the satisfied expression on his face they must have been grand ones.

Thus matters stood when the day dawned upon which the marriage was to occur. Everything was bustle and confusion at the home of the Remsens. The bridesmaids arrived early, helped to deck the bride, and then stood around in delighted admiration. Dora was in ecstasies. Two magnificent bouquets had been sent to her, one entirely of carnation pinks, from Mr. Randolph and the other a fine assortment of cut flowers, among which were three beautiful calla lilies, tied with long white satin ribbons. These were the gift of Mr. Thaurer. She stood admiring the flowers for a few moments, then tenderly untied the pinks, and, taking a few of each color, made a small bouquet, which she pinned just at the opening of her dress near the throat. Thus they were near enough to exhale a fragrance of which she would be continually conscious. Just before leaving the house, however, she took the callas and carried them with her in her gloved hand.

Before the day was over a little tragedy occurred, of which she was not only innocent, but unconscious. In the throng entering the church her pinks were swept from her breast, and in her excitement she did not observe her loss. Mr. Randolph, however, the groom's best man, noted carefully that she carried flowers and that they were not his. Subsequently, she, in reply to a question from him, admitted who had sent them, and though he made no remark he slept little that night. Thus easily men suffer.

Emily was dressed—but there, why should I attempt to describe what only a Worth could have furnished and only wealth could afford? If you can imagine the most beautiful shade and quality of pearl colored silk, and add to that the finest of lace, and to that the most marvelous profusion of tiny ribbon bows, then, as I hinted, recall that the genius of Worth designed the garment, perhaps you will imagine all that I could tell you. At least I may say that as the bride entered the church on the arm of that magnificent man, Mr. Van Rawlston, who, as her father's dearest friend, had been invited to take his place, every woman present took one lingering look at the woman and her gown and then turned to her neighbor to express her admiration. Moreover, I will say that the sum of all that praise was not enough fully to describe Emily Remsen, who looked every inch a royal queen, as Dora delightedly told every one for years afterward.

But after the bridal party had passed people naturally looked for the groom, and they wondered not to see him. Whispering occurred, and inquiries were made without satisfactory response. Some thought that there had been a mistake, and that the signal had been given to the bride and her friends too soon. It was an awkward situation, because, of course, once having reached the altar, they could not turn and leave the church again. Consequently they simply stood and waited. Every one at length grew so nervous that save for the organ there gradually stole over the whole edifice a solemn silence. People were averted, and fear at last, as the minutes passed and still the groom did not appear, that something dreadful either had or was about to occur they almost held their breaths. A few intimate friends went out on tiptoe, but the door leading to the vestry-room was guarded by a man in livery, who would say nothing but that no one could be admitted.

Meanwhile an exciting scene, though a brief one, was being enacted behind that door. Just as the two parties were about to start on their way to the altar a carriage had driven up furiously, and from it had alighted Mr. Barnes. He quickly entered the building and went straightway into the vestry-room, brush-ing aside the man at the door. Once in the presence of the groom and his gentlemen attendants, he astonished them by saying:

"Thank God, I am not too late."

"I did, and this time I am sure he did not suspect that I was after him. He took the child to the Remsens."

"To the Remsens? What can that mean?"

"I don't know. But Mitchell and Miss Remsen are to be married at St. Patrick's cathedral at 10 o'clock this morning."

"Not if I can stop it," replied the detective, and he hastened up to the church with the result told in the last chapter.

Promptly at 2 o'clock Mr. Barnes presented himself at the Fifth Avenue hotel accompanied by Mr. Neully. They were asked to go up to Mr. Mitchell's apartments, and there they were greeted by that gentleman as affably as though they had been of his wedding party. Indeed he began the conversation in rather a jocular way, saying:

"Ah! Mr. Barnes, delighted that now I can entertain you more at my leisure. This morning, you see, I was in a great hurry. You called at a very inopportune time, and I am afraid that I was rather abrupt."

"Mr. Mitchell, I am not in the humor for nonsense. This is a very serious visit, I assure you. This gentleman is Mr. Neully of New Orleans, and he has come all this distance to aid the cause of justice."

"Delighted to meet you, Mr. Neully, I am sure," said Mr. Mitchell, approaching and extending his hand so cordially that the elder man took it, though he had thought that he would rather handle hot coals than the hand of the man who he supposed was guilty of wronging the daughter of his old friend in the south. Mr. Mitchell did not seem to notice his agitation, but, begging them to be seated, he himself took a comfortable chair and continued, "Now, Mr. Barnes, I am wondering if it is possible that you have traced my wife's ruby as far away as New Orleans?"

"I have not been looking for it. I suppose you know why I wished to stop your marriage?"

"Why, no? Not precisely. What was your reason?"

"If you do not know it, why did you get married yesterday?"

"I might reply that it is often done, but I will be honest and tell you that such a procedure never occurred to me till I heard that you were coming home. Then, you see, I thought that you might take the idea into your head—you do get odd notions, you must admit—that I ought not to get married just now. I knew you well enough to believe that if you did harbor a thought of that nature you would not hesitate to interfere. I did you no injustice there, for that is just what you tried to do, you see. Consequently, as I had, set my heart on being married in the cathedral precisely at the time appointed, I just took the bill by the horns and persuaded my little girl to marry me yesterday. That is my story in full, I assure you. Now, what was your object?"

"You know it very well, and all this yarning is pure bluster. You know well enough that I wanted to use Miss Emily Remsen as a witness against you, and that I could not do so after she became Mrs. Mitchell."

"Oh! Well, yes; I admit that idea was in my mind, Mr. Barnes. And now—what are you going to do about it?"

"In the first place, I shall arrest you for abducting the child who was in the care of Rose Moutalbon."

"Mr. Barnes expected some surprise from his adversary, but he was disappointed."

"Yes," said he, "and then?"

"Then I shall compel you, through the court, to reveal her present hiding place and to produce her."

"I think you might have trouble to do that were it not that I do not object to it. In fact, we will reverse your order of things and begin with the production of the child, Emily!"

"In answer to his call his wife came into the room, bringing with her a beautiful girl. Her husband arose, and taking the little one by the hand coolly approached Mr. Neully, and said: "Rose, this is Mr. Neully. He was a dear good friend to your mother, and has come all the way from New Orleans to see you. I think he would like to kiss you, would you not, Lin. Neully?"

That gentleman seemed much moved. To him the vision of loveliness standing demurely before him brought back the memory of the long ago. She reminded him of another little girl whose growth into budding womanhood he had watched tenderly, having in his youth loved her mother, the grandmother of the child before him. His heart had not been successful, and for love that woman he had remained a bachelor all his days. Now he could see changing expressions in this young face, which reminded him of both those women who had been dear to him. Without a word he drew her toward him, and kissed her once. Then he arose, still holding her hand, and led her, toward the door of the next room; there he kissed her once more, this time on the forehead, and then bade her wait, shutting the door after she left him. Then, turning with a fury in his heart and repressed passion in his voice, he exclaimed:

"Mr. Mitchell, either you are the most contemptible villain on the face of this earth, or else there is some hideous mistake here. Explain it, man! I must know at once!"
